

Good afternoon,

I enjoyed reading your insight into the operations of Rogue Services and have they acted with regards to malware.

I think your highlighting of potential human rights implications on the acts of IT professionals is important to discuss. We often think about the direct ethical impacts of our work in the sector, but the truth is that it can impact people in a much more profound way.

I think it would have been beneficial to look at the ethics discussions that arose when actor took aim at Rogue Services to take them down. While they did launch their own attacks at Rogue Services, the ethical implications of this are different due to the aims that the "good faith" actors did.

Overall though, very enjoyable.